

Hand To the Plow: Activating Faith and Thought for Change

Monday, March 27, 2017

1:00 to 4:00 pm

Brite Divinity School, Bass Conference Center

People of Faith today are seeking ways to advocate for a more just and equal society with an urgency not seen since the days of the U.S. Civil Rights struggle. This workshop will show how the separation of church and state, one of the most cherished American values, and the faith imperative of action on behalf of justice are not mutually exclusive—but are actually complementary. Attendees will learn about strategies for prophetic and pastoral action that does not condemn, but instead uplifts “the better angels of our nature” while challenging faith communities to stand up for marginalized people in today’s political climate.

Stephen V. Sprinkle is Professor of Practical Theology, Director of Field Education and Director of Baptist Programming at Brite Divinity School. Dr. Sprinkle is a human rights advocate, a widely sought speaker, and an internationally recognized authority on anti-LGBTQ hate crimes. He is an ordained minister of the Alliance of Baptists.

Register at www.brite.edu/workshop

$25 - Registration (In person includes access to webcast)

$20 Webcast)

$5 - Current students

Office of Lay and Continuing Education

Phone: 817-257-7582

Email: e.theilig@tcu.edu